
MARCUS ENGEL

MS, CPXP, CSP

INTRODUCTION

Marcus Engel is the founder of Narrative Nursing; a therapeutic resource for helping nurses embrace their stories and use reflective writing to increase empathy and reduce compassion fatigue.

In 2012, Marcus Engel graduated with a Master's in Science in Narrative Medicine from Columbia University, where he studied under Rita Charon, M.D., Ph.D., the founder of the discipline of Narrative Medicine.

Combining his years of experience working with nurses on the front line with the academic knowledge of the benefits of reflective writing, Marcus teaches nurses to think critically and creatively about their experiences, to share those stories in a safe environment and gain better understanding of each nurse's vital role in the field of health care.

In addition to NarrativeNursing.com and the weekly writing prompts and workshops, Marcus is currently developing curriculum for nursing schools and is also working on a book entitled, "Narrative Nursing".

Please welcome Marcus Engel and the Narrative Nursing Workshop.
